ORDER AND REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION<sup>1</sup>

Plaintiff Steven S. Brown is an inmate at the Warren Correctional Institution. He claims in the present case that multiple Defendants violated many of his constitutional rights during his previous incarceration at the Ross Correctional Institution. He now seeks, and Defendants oppose, a preliminary injunction. (Doc. #s 231, 233).

Issuance of a preliminary injunction—an extraordinary remedy—depends on the balancing of four factors:

(1) whether the movant has shown a strong likelihood of success on the merits; (2) whether the movant will suffer irreparable harm if the injunction is not issued; (3) whether the issuance of the injunction would cause substantial harm to others; and (4) whether the public interest would be served by issuing the injunction.

Overstreet v. Lexington-Fayette Urban Cty. Gov., 305 F.3d 566, 573 (6th Cir. 2002)

(citation omitted). “Although no one factor is controlling, a finding that there is simply no likelihood of success on the merits is usually fatal.” Gonzales v. National Bd. of Med. Exam’rs, 225 F.3d 620, 625 (6th Cir. 2000) (citation omitted).

As indicated above, Plaintiff’s Motion raises new allegations about events that allegedly occurred during his current incarceration at Warren Correctional. He buttresses his Motion with evidence connected to events that allegedly occurred in early-to-mid 2018. The instant case, however, is largely limited in scope to his pre-2018 claims about alleged events during his confinement at Ross Correctional. Plaintiff’s Motion therefore fails to demonstrate a substantial likelihood of success on any of the pending claims in the present case. King v. Zamiara, 788 F.3d 207, 217 (6th Cir. 2015) (“Because the due-process claim is not at issue in this suit, we may not grant injunctive relief to remedy an alleged due-process violation.” (citing De Beers Consol. Mines Ltd. v. United States, 325 U.S. 212, 220 (1945))).

Plaintiff has also not shown irreparable harm because if—hypothetically—his new 2018 claims have merit, his harm would be fully reparable by way of monetary damages. See Overstreet v. Lexington-Fayette Urban Cty. Government, 305 F.3d 566, 578 (6th Cir. 2002). Further, Plaintiff’s allegations do not implicate either of the remaining preliminary-injunctions factors.

In sum and for the above reasons, the balance of the applicable factors fails to support issuance of the preliminary injunction Plaintiff seeks. Cf. Matthews v. Core Civic, No. 1:16cv0108, 2017 WL 1021287, at *1 (M.D. Tenn. 2017) (Holmes, M.J.) (Report and Recommendation) (“Absent extraordinary and urgently compelling reasons, the Court will not intervene in matters such as the day-to-day operations of a correctional facility....”).

Plaintiff also asks the Court to appoint counsel to represent him in this case. The United States Constitution does not require the appointment of counsel for indigent plaintiffs in civil cases such as this, and Congress has not provided funds with which to compensate attorneys who might agree to represent those plaintiffs. Moreover, there are not enough attorneys who can absorb the costs of representing persons on a voluntary basis to permit the Court to appoint an attorney for all pro se plaintiffs. The Court makes every effort to appoint counsel in civil cases that proceed to trial and, in exceptional circumstances, will attempt to appoint counsel at an earlier stage of a civil case. No such exceptional circumstances presently appear in this case.

Plaintiff lastly seeks an Order granting him an extension of time concerning his “overdue responses to Summary Judgment in the Western District that [he] cannot answer due to O.D.R.C. denial of access to the law and destruction of [his] evidence.” (Doc. #231, PageID #s 2193-94). The deadline for filing motions for summary judgment in the instant case is more than two months away. No motion for summary judgment is now pending in the instant case and, consequently, Plaintiff’s response to such a motion cannot be overdue. If Plaintiff seeks an extension of time in his other case, he must pursue it by motion in that case.<sup>2</sup>

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED THAT:

Plaintiff’s Motion for Appointment of Counsel and Motion for Extension of Time (Doc. #237) are DENIED.

<sup>2</sup> Plaintiff’s other pending case is Steven S. Brown v. Director Mohr, et al., 1:12cv583 (S.D. Ohio) (Barrett, J.; Bowman, M.J.).

IT IS THEREFORE RECOMMENDED THAT:

Plaintiff's Motion for Preliminary Injunction (Doc. #231) be DENIED.
